CHATEAU de RAMEZAY

THE CHATEAU DE RAMEZAY.

"I pray you let us satisfy our eyes with the memorials and the things of fame that do renown this city."

Such was the request of Sebastian to Antonio, in Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night" when he entered the city in Illyria, the residence of the Duke of Orsino. The same desire would be natural to a stranger visiting Montreal, were he of a reflective character, to see the buildings and places associated with the memory of departed worth or greatness. Unfortunately the memorials and things of fame that do renown Montreal are few, and these of comparatively recent date. The buildings of the past are fast disappearing. What a pity it is so. Where are the things of fame that renowned the city at the time of its surrender to Amherst in 1760, when it contained only 3,000 inhabitants? Where are the principal buildings that once stood between Dalhousie square along the line of Notre-Dame Street, and the Place d'Armes? where are the "Old houses neatly built of stone, and the Château de Vaudreuil described by Kalm in 1749? Where are the Old hospital founded by Madame de Buillon in 1647, the Old Grey Nunnery, the old mill built by the Sulpicians in 1710, the old Recollet Monastery and Church, in which the first Presbyterian congregation organized in Montreal conducted worship after the manner of the Covenanters?

Alas! there is no trace of the old buildings left, which were erected at various periods during the reign of Louis XIV, of France, with the exception of the most renowned of all, the Château de Ramezay.

There stands no building the length and breadth of the Dominion, around which associate so many of the thrilling events, episodes and social life of our history, as pertain to this Château, the oldest public building in the country. Not only in French days but in those of our own era this building has occupied a prominent focal point from which diverged some of the greatest events of our history. Under the French régime the Governors were appointed for the honor of the position and so regarded it. The salary was small and they had to pay for public as well as private entertainments and build their own palaces.

Claude de Ramezay, the 11th Governor of Montreal, appointed 1703, was born in France 1657, came to Canada in 1685, with a number of other young officers, in the suite of Governor de Denonville. He was then a lieutenant in de Troye's company of the Marine troops, which later took part in the expedition to Hudson's Bay. His promotion was rapid, being captain in 1687, later colonel, then commandant of troops and finally governor.

In 1687 he took part in the expedition against the Iroquois and in 1690 when Phipps appeared before Quebec, he brought over 800 men from Montreal for the defence of the former town.

History tells of the spirited defence made by Frontenac and his gallant officers, the latter, no doubt, being encouraged by the bright smiles of some of Quebec's fair daughters who, it seems, lost no time in rewarding their brave defenders with their heart and hand. Scarcely had the last of Phipps' fleet disappeared around Point Levi, than de Ramezay led to the altar Melle. Marie-Charlotte Deny's, a daughter of Deny de la Ronde one of the oldest and wealthiest families of Canada. His example was soon followed by de Vaudreuil, d'Ailleboust and many others. Could they have seen into the future their happiness would have been clouded by sorrow, for it was destined that a son of de Ramezay should be the one to open the gates of Quebec to the English in 1759, and a son of de Vaudreuil should do likewise, at Montreal, the following year.

De Ramezay was one of the most prominent men of his time, occupying an official position in Canada for a term exceeding forty years. He was Seigneur de la Gessse, de Montigny et Boisfleurent, in France, and in Canada was Seigneur de Monnoir and de Ramezay, Knight of the Military Order of St. Louis, Governor of Montreal, and Commandant of all the militia in the country, and was administrator of the Governor-Generalship during the two years' absence of de Vaudreuil in France.

The Chateau was built in 1705. The neighborhood was then the fashionable part of the town and was occupied by the Baron de Longueuil, the Contrecoeurs, d'Eschambaults, d'Aillebouts and Madame de Portneuf, the widow of Baron Bécancourt. Situated on a hill and opposite to the magnificent garden of the Jesuits, this plain unembellished house had an open view to the river front.

Under de Ramezay's regime, 1703 to 1724, this venerable edifice was the hall of entertainment of the illustrious of the country. The many expeditions to the distant fur fields, the voyages of discovery of new lands, the councils of war, the military expeditions, the conferences with the Indians, the annual fairs and fur trading market attracted to the shores of Montreal, not only the Governor-General, the Intendant, and their suites, but a considerable number of the most important people of the country including all classes of society. To one and all the portals of this hospitable mansion were ever open. To the lowly Indian and his squaw and to the exalted nobleman and his consort, the noble and beneficent Ramezay and his family showed equal attention. Fearless to the Indian or enemy, his bravery and charity were equally exemplified in the personal care and attention he and his family gave to the suffering citizens of Montreal during the pest which devastated the town in 1721.

De Ramezay died in 1724, and his family sold the Chateau to the "Compagnie des Indes" in 1745. The latter retained possession until the cession, 1763, when it was bought by Wm. Grant, Baron de Longueuil who in turn disposed of it to the English Government for the sum of two thousand guineas. It thus became once again the residence of the Governors and remained such up to 1849.

In 1775-6, the Chateau was the Head-quarters for the Continental Army under Montgomery, and in the spring of 1776, there came Benjamin Franklin, Carroll of Carrollton and Samuel Chase envoys sent by Congress to influence the French Canadians, to join the colonies in the revolt against British rule. Then came Benedict Arnold who occupied the Chateau for several weeks.

Lord Metcalfe was the last resident governor, but for some years after his establishment in a new government house the Chateau was used for departmental offices. When the government was withdrawn from Montreal the Chateau served several purposes. For some years the court were held here, and later the Normal School.

In 1894, the Chateau was sold by the Government and purchased by the Corporation of the City of Montreal and in 1895, the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society obtained the building for the purpose of founding an Historical Portrait-Gallery and Museum.

PORTRAITS.

86. Dorchester, Guy Carleton Lord, born 1725, died 1808 Governor General of Canada 1767 to 1777, and from 1786 to 1796. Was with Wolfe at the battle of the Plains of Abraham and with Murray at St. Foy. By his judicious conduct did much to strengthen the French Canadian loyalty to England.

BARON HOLMFELDT.

By Subscription.

87. Gosford, Earl of, G. C. B.

Held the office of Governor-General, from August, 1835 to February 26th, 1838. He was chief of a commission of enquiry and pacification whose labours it was hoped by ministers in England, would have led to the adjustment of all political differences and the establishment of the Government upon a firm and liberal footing. That Lord Gosford did not succeed in his administration of the Government, and calming the dissensions by which the country was torn, cannot be imputed to his memory as a disgrace, his predecessors for years having not been more fortunate. Sir John Colborne assumed the administration of the Government on his departure. Lord Gosford died, in England, March 29th. 1849.

St. Mary's College.

88. Haldimand, Sir Frederick, K. B., a native of Switzerland; entered the British Army in 1751. Greatly distinguished himself at the battles of Ticonderoga and Oswego. Lieutenant-Governor of Canada, June 27th. 1778, to Nov. 18th. 1784. Died in England.

BARON HOLMFELDT.

By Subscription.

99. Richmond, Charles Lennox, fourth Duke of Richmond, Lennox and Aubigny K. G., born 1784, died 1820. Governor-General of Canada 1819 to 27th. August 1820. Death cut short the career of this great man through the bite of a tame fox with which he was amusing himself. His demise occurred at a small village on the Ottawa named after himself; his remains were conveyed to Quebec, and buried in the English Cathedral of that City.

Hon. Judge Baby.

100. Durham, Right Hon. The Earl of, born 1792, died 1840. On the recall of Lord Gosford, Earl Durham was appointed Governor-General, arriving in May 1838. Every act of the new Governor was marked by liberality and disinterestedness. He disposed of all the political prisoners without a formal trial; the minor offenders were pardoned, and 80 of the ringleaders were banished to Bermuda. The British Parliament did not approve of this and set aside Lord Durham's ordinance whereby the prisoners had been banished. On learning this, the governor sent in his resignation.

Hon. Judge Baby.

101. Bagot, Sir Charles, G. C. B., born 1781, died 1844. Entered upon the office of Governor-General, January 10th. 1842. During his time, some of our most talented Canadian statesmen came into office, and many improvements were effected. In consequence of illness he solicited his recall towards the close of 1843, and he survived only a few months.

Hon. Judge Baby.

102. Elgin, Right Hon. Earl of, born 1811, died 1863. Governor-General of Canada, from 1847 to 1854. One of the best known of Canadian Governors, and whatever may have been the troubles during his administration, impartial history will do justice to his memory as a wise ruler. His Lordship will rank amongst the best and ablest of those who have guided the destinies of Canada.

R. B. Angus Esq.

THE VAULTS.

- No. 1 In this vault the first printing press in Montreal was set up in 1776, by Mesplets who accompanied Benj. Franklin, and the other two envoys who had been sent by Congress in the Spring of that year. Mesplets, a Frenchman, remained in Montreal after the Americans withdrew. He opened a printing office on Place Royale where he published the Montreal Gazette.

THE RIGAUD BELL. This Bell was cast in London in 1801, for the parish Church at Rigaud, where it was in use for many years.

C. de Lery Macdonald, Esq.

- No. 2. (1). In this vault may be seen an ancient Caleche, which was the most stylish vehicle in the olden time.

- (2). Old scales, belonged to the French Jesuits, and dates to 1683, they were used in a mill at Cap de la Madeleine, near Three Rivers.

T. Lefebvre, Esq.

- No. 3. This vault, in the olden time, was used for storage purposes. It was divided into four parts by walls about four feet in thickness, two of which were removed. During the occupancy by the English Governors this vault was used as a wine cellar. Being fire proof it now serves for the storage of valuable documents.

No. 4. This vault was the principal kitchen of the Château. The great fire-place had a crane on which the pots were hung, and up the chimney is an iron bar on which hams and bacon were smoked. A recess at the side is where a wheel used to be, for the purpose of turning the spit and generally run by a dog. In this vault may be seen—

A. A wooden pipe of the first water-works in Montreal 1801-1815.

Starke, Esq.

B. The Cross of the Recollet Church, built 1692, demolished in 1866. In this Church worshipped for some time both Catholics and Protestants. At the time of the conquest there being no Protestant Church in Montreal, the Recollet Fathers kindly gave the use of theirs to the English.

C. The weather-vane from old St. Gabriel Church, the first Protestant Church built in Montreal, 1792, demolished 1903.

Chief Legault.

D. An old Canadian chair [frame only], found in the attic of the Château.

E. A very finely wrought weather-vane from one of the out-buildings of the Château.

F. Iron knee of the King's ship l'Original which sank in the harbor of Quebec in 1750, while being launched.

Quebec Harbor Commissioners.

G. Old crane from an early French house on Jacques-Cartier Square.

F. D. Monk, Esq.

—o—

No. 5. This vault was used as kitchen and bakery. In the side of the fire-place is the capacious oven, in as perfect condition as when in use nearly two centuries ago.

In this vault may be seen—

The main door and fanlight of the Chapel of Notre-Dame de Victoire, built in 1713, demolished 1900. This Chapel was built to commemorate the destruction of Admiral Walker's fleet below Quebec in 1711. Governor de Ramezay took part in the laying of the corner stone of this Chapel.

—o—

No. 6. This vault was used as a pantry or storeroom. In passing out of this vault the great thickness of the walls may be observed, starting with a width of seven feet they, widen as the arch curves, and the crown of the arch, [the thinnest part], is four feet to the floor above.

—o—

In front of the Château is the Louisbourg gun weighing four tons. This gun was on the French man-of-war "La Prudente," which was sunk by the English in the harbor of Louisbourg in 1758. It was raised in 1900, brought to Montreal and presented to the Château by

S. Coulson, Esq.

The gun carriage an old English one of oak, made in 1843, was presented by the Honorable Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia.

The pile of solid shot number 91. This shot was brought from Cuba after the Spanish American War.

R. W. McLachlan, Esq.

The two figures, representing Commerce and Industry, are the work of the talented Canadian artist Ph. Hébert. They were placed on the Post-office in 1875, removed 1899, and presented to the Château by Judge L. W. Sicotte.

Cannon from one of the nine ships of Sir Hovenden Walker's fleet wrecked on "Isle-aux-Œufs" Aug. 26, 1711. In the Expedition which sailed for Quebec, to wrest Canada from the French.

Geo. Boulter, Esq.

The tower of the Château is surmounted by an antique wrought iron vane [from the old Recollet Church], made in 1692.
